About the course

Mushrooms form an important nutrient rich food material used all over the world. In many countries like U. S. A, Japan and China, it is cultivated in large scale for domestic and international markets. It forms a delicious food with its unique nutrient content and medicinal properties. In our country the production is trace, but many like this food material. In the near future it may be widespread in use, but the production is very low to fulfil the need of people. The mushroom cultivation may form an important income source for the village people and thus form a mean for self-employment. The favourable climate in Kerala and little space needed for cultivation may attract the young generation for start-up programmes in this field.
